the government's credit. It seems to be viewed s more prudent to be guilty of a breach of law and of contempt of court and to assume the responsibility of permitting the government's obligation to go to protest than to refuse Mr. Holman's request that the Treasury Department cease the performance of its legal functions until he can gratify his yearning for the colle tion of pointless and irrelevant statistics, which can be secured in an hour without formal investigation and which on their face are of no earthly consequence when collected. Is there eot danger that a democratic House which has persistently endeavored to show that the treasary is out of funds will soon be pointing to this avoidance of a national obligation as the trans parent device of a shifty, failing debtor to dodge his creditors and conceal his bankruptcy so long as possible?

In the so-called compromise in Virginia the final issue is postponed. The Virginia democrate simply agree not to take a decisive vote. The question of choice for the presidential nomination is relegated to the delegation to Chicago, one-half of which favors and the other opposes Mr. Cleveland. In the distribution of ors the Cleveland men fared best, for in addition to half the delegates from a body stoutly claimed by the anti-Clevelandites in advance of its assembling they obtained the permanent chairman of the convention, the chairman of the state executive committee, the phrasing partly in the ex-President's language and wholly in his spirit of the tariff plank of the platform. The opposition solace themselves with the reflection that they prevented the other fellow, from obtaining a declaration in favor of Cleveland. They figure, too, in the organiza-tion, as well as hold half of the delegates. This latter is an advantage certainly. The convention was probably a Cleveland body by a very slight majority, which, however, was not put to a test. The Virginians pride themselves on having several times in the history of the democratic party, even since the comparative de-cline of the state's influence, taken the lead in making the presidential nomination. Divided equally the delegation cannot exert a controlling influence in 1892. Thus the net result of the Richmond convention is adverse to the power of the state in national affairs. A contrary course—the ratification of the Cleveland program and a contest with Georgia for the headship of the Cleveland column, or a positive declaration against Cleveland-would have been more in accordance with the old position of the state.

While there is division among the historians s to whether the people of Mecklenburg county. North Carolina, did or did not declare indeadence of the mother country on the 20th of June, 1775, there is general credence given the tradition on the subject in the state itself. That the spirit of independence existed there among the stern Scotch-Irishmen as early as anywhere else is not disputed. In his oration in honor of the day, delivered today at Charlotte, Senator Hill not only assumed the fact as proved, which is not to be wondered at, since he was addressing an audience who would metaphorically have rended a speaker limb from limb who would have had the temerity to tell them the contrary, but he paid his respects to all the critics who wreck or try to wreck famous reputations. Only George Washington, said Mr. Hill, is left. Yes, and the "grey forebeen spared by the remorseless critics, the senator might have stated, if he had known the facts. And yet the victims live while the critics are forgotten. It will always be so. The reconstruction of character is a game at which more than one historical writer or set of historical writers can play. Whatever opinion the North Carolinians have of the New York Senator as a public man and candidate for further honors at the hands of his party they are apt to be pleased with his somewhat grandiose and highly complimentary address on their great anniversary day.

The export of wheat for the month ending April 30 was nearly double last year's export for the same period, and for the ten months previous nearly four times as great. In the item of wheat flour the excess of 1892 over 1891 is not so much, the figures standing respectively 61,828,230 barrels to 45,182,605 barrels. The figures indicate that Europe has drawn upon us chiefly for breadstuffs and far more largely for grain than tour during the famine year in Russia and the pinch in some other countries. The increase of exports of meat products due to reciprocity arrangements meat products due to reciprocity arrangements is as yet small, because the arrangements have just been effected and the principal season for such exports is not yet arrived.

The anarchist demonstrations in Paris have led to a bill that provides for the arrest of journalists and the suppression of papers on sus-picion. France is on dangerous ground. It is better to let a fanaticism exhaust itself in words than to repress it at the risk of an explosion, Unhesitating justice in the courts will do more good than newspaper censorship can under any cuntil you have used "Ceres" Flour before you give up trying to make good bread. It is not always your fault that the bread is not light and good. In the first place, the chief requisite of good bread is a good flour, which should be fine, white, full of gluten, and slightly symmiar to the touch. All of these qualities you will find "Ceres" Flour to possess, and it also possesses the additional good quality of having the good opinion and universal commendation of the housekeepers of this city. If you sak them what they think of it they will tell you that it makes "more" bread, "whiter" bread and "better" bread, "whiter" bread and "better" bread than any other four they swerused. Ask your grocer for "Ceres" Flour and we feel confident that your bread will be good.

styles in energithing in its wake. GLOVES with the rest. Now about GLOVES. There is a great difference in them. Some are made right. Others are not. CELEBRATED HEINZ REFRIGERATOR. great many that are not. But they don't get in ere. NEVER. Such makes as WE carry have had their merits tested by season after season of service. That makes our GLOVE DEPARTMENT a "safe harbor" for all shoppers. No shoals-no dangerous spotsclear sailing for the experienced—the INTXPERI-ENCED. It takes lots of virtues to make perfect Gloves—they must be cut right or they won's fit—and if they don't fit nobody wants them. Then the material-kid or fabrics must be serviceable quality-the right color-and stitched right. OURS came from REYNIER, TREFOUSSE, AUG. CHARLES, BALSAN, FOSTER and P. CETEMERI, our fountainhead. You never find these makers dabbling in doubs ful qualities. If you wear the work of any one of
